History of City's Negotiations for Lower Street Lighting Rates

Power Company Says City Loses $10,000 a Year By Failure to Accept Offer

Lower Power Rating for Local Industry Made Independent of City Contracts — Herald Investigator Finds No Reason to Doubt Sincerity of Either Side.

Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of articles about the public utility situation, written by Henry C. Hagloch, special investigator engaged by The Circleville Herald. The third article will appear on Friday of this week.

By Henry C. Hagloch.

In June, 1932, the Circleville city council, alarmed over the city's financial condition and seeking possible means of economy, requested the Southern Ohio Electric Co. to assist it in working out a plan whereby the city might reduce its street lighting cost in the sum of $1,500 during the second half of the year 1932.

At that time there existed a five-year contract between the city and the electric company which did not terminate until Dec. 31, 1932, calling for $9,199.56 per year for street lighting. Waiving the remainder of its contract the power company agreed to release the city from the existing contract during the remaining six months, permit reduction in the contracted candlepower of the lamps and finally to reduce its contract charge during the second half of 1932 in the sum of $1,500.

But the electric company proposed that council enter into a new five-year contract, effective from Sept. 1, 1932, for lighting streets under council's revised specifications at an annual cost of $7,679.20, being a reduction of $1,520.36 per year from the then existing price of $9,199.56 per year. At the same time the company offered to light the streets under the same revised specifications on a 10-year contract at an annual cost of $7,246.52, being a reduction of $1,953.04 per year from the then existing contract price. Acceptance of a 10-year contract, in preference to a five-year contract, would have saved the city $432.68 a year more.

OFFERED RATE CUT

The electric company, however, offered also at this time, (now more than a year ago), to reduce its rates for residence and commercial lighting, despite the fact that the ordinance passed by council in 1931, fixing such rates for a period of five years, had at that time almost four years to run and at this date still has nearly three years to go. The proposed reduction was one cent per kilowatt hour on the first 50 hours per month, which would have provided a savings of 50 cents per month for each and every consumer using 50 or more KWH per month and, based on the number of consumers, would have saved the Circleville consumer group an aggregate of $550 per month or $6,600 per year.

Early in the negotiations, council rejected the 10-year contract, and requested 5-year and 3-year contract proposals for a fixed number of lamps of specified candlepower, the total of which was greatly reduced from that of the existing system.

In response to these requests, the company proposed to light the streets, according to council's revised specifications, under a 5-year contract for $4,942.50 a year, a reduction from the present annual cost of $4,257.06 or 46.3 per cent; or under a 3-year contract for $5,513.50 a year, a reduction from the present cost of $3,686.50 a year, or 40 per cent. In both proposals the unit cost of each lamp was reduced.

The reason for the lower prices for the longer contracts is obvious and is recognized by general practice. There are certain definite costs attached to street lighting that must be included in the price per lamp. If these costs are distributed over a short period of years the annual cost will be greater than if they are distributed over a longer period. Also if the electric company is assured that a new contract will be negotiated at the expiration of each contract period, its initial investment need not be recovered wholly during the initial period of contract. Also a lower rate for a subsequent contract is made possible because the company has recovered part of its original investment during the previous period.

SALES VARY WIDELY
Some costs in street lighting remain unchanged regardless of the size of lamp used. It requires the same number of poles and miles of line to provide energy for a lighting system composed wholly of 100-candle power lamps as for a lighting system of the same area composed of the same number of 400-candle power lamps. But the total energy sales vary widely between the two systems, a 400-lamp using three and one-half times as much as the 100-candle power lamp. There is also a difference in cost of lamp renewals.

Obviously, when a municipality decreases the size of lamps but retains its lighted area, it saves only on the cost of energy, and overhead charges will be larger on a 3-year contract than if spread over five or ten years.

POST DELAYED IN FAST TRIP OVER SIBERIA

Lands Winnie Mae in Frigid Town; Fear Robot Feed-Line Trouble

WEATHER HINDERS

Post Only Slightly Ahead of Old Record

BULLETIN

Post hopped off a few minutes after he landed at Blagovestshensk.

MOSCOW, July 19.—Wiley Post, American round-the-world flyer, landed today at Blagovestshensk, Siberia, on his attempted hop from Irkutsk to Khabarovsk.

Blagovestshensk is on the northern Manchurian-Siberian frontier, 1,000 miles east of Irkutsk and 400 miles west of Khabarovsk.

It is believed here the American flyer may have been forced down by trouble with the feed-pipe on his robot.

IRKUTSK, Siberia, July 19.—With his lead over the present globe-grinding record almost wiped out by heavy rains and fog, which held him earthbound here for many hours, Wiley Post resumed his bold dash around the world today, hopping off for Khabarovsk, Siberia, at 1:00 p. m. (midnight Tuesday E. D. T.).

When Post landed here at 9:35 p. m. yesterday (8:35 a. m. E. D. T.), he had a lead of 16 hours and 34 minutes over the record he and Harold Gatty established over the same route two years ago.

Extremely bad flying weather held him here much longer than he had planned however, and he had been grounded for 15 hours and 25 minutes before he was able to get away.

SLIGHTLY AHEAD

Post and Gatty spent only 2 hours and 15 minutes here in 1931. (Continued on Page Two)

WALNUT-TWP MEN SEEKING STRANGER

Man Thought Demented Object of Intensive Search; Guns Brandished.

A young man, believed to be an escaped inmate from the Orient feeble-minded institute, who has been harassing the Walnut-twp community, was the object of an intensive search, Wednesday, as farmers shouldered their guns and aided Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Miller Fissell in the search.

The suspicious character first appeared last Friday and has been making appearances at various intervals since. While children of Mrs. Luke McNeal were playing near Walnut creek, the man came down out of a tree and ran. Another time he attempted to break into the McNeal house.

Wednesday morning he was seen on the W. H. Plum farm and farmers immediately formed a posse and searched a corn field believing that he was hiding there. He was not found, however. Sheriff Radcliff and Deputy Fissell also aided in the search.

Residents of this section of the township are excited about the man's appearance and are anxious for his apprehension.

Woman Relates Jail's Horrors

American Forced To Occupy Spanish Cell Next To Demented Woman.

PALMA, MALLORCA, July 19.—Complaining she "felt funny in the head," Mrs. Caroline Lockwood, one of five Americans held in jail here without bail, told of her examination by a doctor today to determine her physical and mental health.

A slim, fragile figure, who has been forced to bear the ravings of a demented woman in a cell next to her for six weeks, Mrs. Lockwood, near breakdown, leaned wearily against her cell bars as she told her story.

Her eyes filled with tears as she told of her examination by the doctor, who will make a report to the military judge so that he may determine whether she may be released to a hospital or her home here.

BALBO'S MEN SPEED EAST

Italian Squadron Passes Over Ohio In Flight Toward New York.

ERIE, Pa., July 19.—Flashing eastward at bullet-like speed, the Italian armada from Chicago to New York began passing Erie at 12:15 E. D. T. today.

The armada swept into the air from Lake Michigan this morning, bound for New York on the first lap of the return to Orbetello.

The planes were flying far off shore and very high.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Italy's Atlantic squadron of 24 silver seaplanes commanded by Gen. Italo Balbo hopped off from Chicago harbor in Lake Michigan at 7:45 a. m. (C.D.T.) today for New York, first stop on the return to Orbetello.

The armada took off in groups of three planes, General Balbo's own being first to get away. The others skinned across the harbor and followed him upward in rapid succession.

After circling low over the "loop" Balbo left behind the Century of Progress and hundreds of cheering spectators, nosing his flagship southeast along the shore of Lake Michigan.

Just before taking off General Balbo announced he would follow the American airways route east to a great extent weather permitting.

This route will take him over Sandusky, Lorain, Elyria, Cleveland, and Ashtabula, Ohio; Erie, Pa., Dunkirk and Buffalo, New York. The Italians then will fly to Batavia and down the air route over Buffalo, Rochester, Oswego, Onondaga, Utica, Schenectady, Syracuse and Albany. From Albany the fliers will go straight down the Hudson to New York.

Bankrupt Couple Bandit Suspects

FENNVILLE, Mich., July 19.—A Detroit man and his wife who went bankrupt on an Allegan-co farm, tried to recoup their fortune today by holding up the state bank of Fennville.

A posse of citizens ran them down, captured both and recovered their lot—but not until two possemen and the farmer-bandit had been wounded in a gun battle.

The wounded were Ed Austin, 40, the farmer-bandit, and Russell McKillips, 22 and Kenneth Jackson, 30, members of the posse. McKillips and Austin were reported in critical condition.

Austin's wife was not injured by the bullets that riddled the old car in which she and her husband tried to escape.

Austin told Marshal Herbert McCann that he had been held up for several weeks. He and his wife drove into Fennville from their farm last night and broke into the bank building.

UNITED THURSDAY

Gown Ignited By Coal Stove in Bedroom

Mrs. Ella Stein Crites, widow of the late Edson B. Crites, died Tuesday at 7 p. m. at the home of her son, Elliott Ellsworth Crites, South Bloomfield, of burns she suffered at noon when her dressing gown was ignited by a coal stove in her bedroom.

The accident happened at 11 a. m. and Mrs. Crites suffered great pain until death came at 7 o'clock. The tragic accident was discovered by Mrs. Elliott Crites who heard a scream and cries from the elder Mrs. Crites' room. She ran upstairs to find the aged woman on the floor writhing in pain with her gown burning. Mrs. Crites was beyond assistance when the accident was discovered.

HAD BEEN INVALID

The elder woman, a resident here until four years ago, had been an invalid for the past year after suffering a fractured hip. She had been under Mrs. Elliott Crites' constant care. Tuesday morning, the younger Mrs. Crites dressed her hip and went back downstairs. In some manner the elderly woman got out of her bed when her gown caught fire from the stove.

The deceased was widely known in Circleville and Pickaway-co. She was a native of Pickaway-co, a daughter of David and Mary Ann Billick Stein. She was the last of the Stein family.

She was married Nov. 19, 1895, to Edson B. Crites, son of Levi and Mary Heffner Crites. He was a prominent Circleville man being engaged for a number of years in the grain business with his brother, H. M. Crites, S. Court-st. Later he became interested in the canning business.

Mr. Crites succumbed in February, 1899, after an illness of only two days.

Mrs. Crites was a member of the Presbyterian church. Private funeral services will be held at the Elliott Crites home Thursday at 2 p. m. with Rev. C. H. Morrison of South Bloomfield officiating. Interment will be in Forest cemetery by Mader & Ebert.

By International News Service
Two of Dixie's traditionally bone-dry states—Alabama and Arkansas—both still beer-less, about faced and swung the axe today on the discredited prohibition amendment, recording smashing two to one majorities for repeal.

The vote, widely accepted as the death knell of national prohibition brought the drive for repeal to the halfway mark, 18 states having voted in an uninterrupted line to strike the 18th amendment from the constitution.

TENNESSEE TO VOTE

Tennessee, third southern state to weigh the question this week, prepared to go to the polls tomorrow with repeal forces, jubilant over the two apparent victories in yesterday's referendum, claiming the Volunteer state as already "in the bag."

Oregon voters ballot Friday on repeal, with ratification generally conceded probable. With more than half the vote counted this morning, majorities of approximately two to one in both states were indicated. Prohibition leaders in Alabama and Arkansas at midnight admitted defeat.

Alabama, with three-fifths of the vote counted in 66 of 67 counties gave 70,254 for repeal to 43- (Continued on Page Three)

PIRATES FACE GIANT NINE IN 6-GAME MEET

Series Is Crucial One With Fate of Pittsburgh Team At Hand.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Pittsburgh, entrenched in third place four games behind the pace-setting Giants, gets its big chance to make a decisive bid for the National league pennant in the six-game series with the New Yorkers that starts in the smoky city today.

One crucial series has ruined many a Pittsburgh team in the past dozen years, and by the same token victory in four of these six important contests will put the pre-season pennant favorites abreast of the Giants and bolster their none too steady morale.

Successful in nine out of thirteen games during their present home stand, the Bucs have their hitting logs on for the battle with Bill Perry's all-star mound staff. They have amassed a total of 49 blows in their last three starts.

Yesterday the Pirates made it three straight over Brooklyn, 11 to 8, after spotting the Dodgers to a six-run lead. Tony Piet drove in the tying and winning markers after sloppy playing by Wright and Lopez had given Pittsburgh a new lease on life. Vaughan also starred with four hits.

The Giants also staged a slugging carnival, combining three Cincinnati pitchers for 19 hits in a 14 to 1 landslide. Blondy Ryan amazed even himself by collecting four blows and Vergez hit a homer with the bases loaded. The Reds scored their first earned run off Schumacher in 33 innings but Hal had no trouble in hanging up his eleventh victory of the season.

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

JUDGE TO APPEAL

PORTSMOUTH, July 19.—Municipal Judge Horace L. Small was to hear his sentence today in common pleas court where he was convicted on an intoxication charge.

POST DELAYED

so that at the time of Post's take-off today he was only three hours and 24 minutes ahead of the present record.

As he headed out over the 2,124-mile route to Khabarovsk, however, the interpid American aviator expected to again build the lead up by slightly faster flying than he was able to do with Gatty and not making any intermediate stops.

Post and Gatty took nearly 24 hours in getting from here to Khabarovsk, stopping enroute at Blagoveschensk. Post alone expected to make the hop in about 15 hours. If he did this he would reach the eastern city by about 3:00 p. m. (E.D.T.) today and would increase his lead over the present record to about 12 hours.

STOPPED BY WEATHER

He had not planned, however, on staying here anywhere near as long as he was finally forced to. He tried to get away once in fact at 5:00 a. m. (4:00 p. m. yesterday (E.D.T.)), but was compelled to abandon the attempt when the soggy condition of the airport prevented his heavily-laden ship from taking the air.

The long stop-over undoubtedly was good for Post as far as his physical well-being was concerned, enabling him to get a much-needed rest on his previous stops at Berlin, Koenigsberg, Germany, Moscow, and Novosibirsk. The flyer had cut rest periods to a minimum and got very little actual sleep. All through Russia airport officials are marveled at the way he keeps up his fast pace without sleep.

Post's long stay here enabled him to store up energy for the difficult and hazardous hops immediately ahead of him.

The W. E. C. seems to be a case of off agenda, on agenda, gone agenda.

ceived and accepted a bid from M. Matthews of Cincinnati for the 11 farms, including 4,800 acres in Madison-co Mr. Simkins announced. Matthews is a relative of Cooper Proctor of the well known firm of Proctor and Gamble, Cincinnati.

APPROVED TUESDAY

Purchase of this great block of land in Pickaway and Madison-cos at the public sales two weeks ago for $308,800 was given court approval yesterday afternoon when Judge Benson W. Hough in U. S. District court, Columbus, ordered official entry of the transaction.

The land, including 11 farms each in Pickaway and Madison-cos with a total area of 7,800 acres was sold at public sale two weeks ago by U. S. Marshall Paul Creswell. The farms are the second of three big items in the farm enterprise of which H. M. Crites, S. Court-st, was the foster.

A week ago 11 grain elevators that were once a part of the property were purchased by the Ralston-Purina Co. of St. Louis. The St. Louis Co has taken over the elevators and has already begun work to put the new holdings in operation.

The last of the Crites holdings are six canning factories, all in this same section. They are being operated by Crites Inc., a creditors' organization.

Court order for the sale of the farming land followed the filing of foreclosure suits by the insurance company, asking $367,000 against Crites and others. Judge

Hough issued the order for entry of the sale after a conference with Paul H. Creswell of Xenia, U. S. Marshall who handled the sale; Davis Harrison of the firm of Indianapolis, Ind., and Remy of the insurance company and Richard Simkins and Col. George Florence, of this city, receivers named by the federal court in the action.

Pike Contribution To Pickaway-Co.

For the following item of news and comment, we are indebted to the weekly Republican Herald of Waverly and Pike-co.

"As is the habit of certain Circlevillians to do, from time to time, a quartet of more or less distinguished Circleville gentlemen visited Waverly and Pike-co on last Sunday.

"Composing the group were Messrs. E. L. Daley, W. M. Reid, H. G. Stevenson and J. W. Johnson.

"Mr. Daley is a Rotarian and at a recent meeting at the Roggs hotel in Circleville he was elected as president and at the same meeting was chosen as the delegate to the International convention at Boston. At a subsequent meeting of the Circleville school board from a list of some sixty applicants he was elected to the superintendency of the city public schools.

"We are thus particular in our mention of Mr. Daley because he was born in Pike-co, and naturally we have more than a little pride in his advancement. It will be of additional interest to mention so we are informed, that at the same meeting at which Mr. Daley was made President of the Rotarians another former Pike-co man, Mr. S. G. Rader, succeeded to the vice presidency of the fraternal order. And while we can not lay claim, account of birth or nativity as to the other three gentlemen of the company we may be permitted to observe that the frequent visits of two of them to our beloved hills and dales justify our allusion to them as adopted Pike-co citizens. The remaining member of the company together with his family made his home in Waverly for nearly thirty years which is the next thing to being born here.

"Mr. Daley, with his parents emigrated to Pickaway-co at an early age. He is a graduate of the school of hard knocks and a post graduate of the New Holland high school, Lebanon Normal, Ohio U. at Athens and Ohio State. He has been a teacher of high standing for many years.

"Mr. Rader taught in Pike and was at one time employed in the Waverly schools.

"Mr. Reid is a retired teacher of nearly forty years of experience. "Mr. Stevenson is a leading Circleville merchant.

lower rates, did not vote. He can vote only in case of a tie.

The proposed new domestic rate offered by the power company was never introduced in council, apparently in the belief that its fate was tied to that of the street lighting ordinance.

AID TO INDUSTRIES

In the meantime the electric company voluntarily reduced its power rates to a point enabling large Circleville industries to save $6,500 a year on their cost of energy, a saving that doubtless benefits the city because it enables plants in highly competitive business to continue to employ hundreds of wage earning citizens.

The Southern Ohio Electric Co. summarizes its position in the following statement:

"The Electric Company a year ago offered to make an outright gift of $1,500 to the City by reduction of its street lighting bill for the last half of 1932; the Electric Company now offers to enter into a new 3-year contract by which the City may reduce its street lighting cost $11,058.18 during the contract term; also the Electric Company now offers to accept a new 5-year lighting ordinance entailing the sacrifice on its part of $20,000 in revenue during the 3-year unexpired term of the existing ordinance.

"Including the month of June, the City of Circleville owes The Southern Ohio Electric Company for street lighting the sum of $11,824.81 and the bill is increasing $766.63 each month. No payment has been made since March, 1932, but the Electric Company has not embarrassed the City by demand for settlement.

"Each month's delay by Council in accepting the Electric Company's proposal to light the streets for $5,513.50 per year means an unnecessary added debt of $307.17, or an additional annual cost of $3,686.06.

"Had Council accepted the Electric Company's proposal to reduce rates for Residence and Commercial lighting, the people of Circleville would have saved $5,500 on their private lighting bills from September 1, 1932, when the Company first proposed its offer should be made effective, to the end of June, 1933.

"Every private lighting customer in Circleville would have benefitted by the proposed reduction of one cent per kilowatt hour for the first fifty kilowatt hours' use per month and every tax-payer in Circleville would have benefitted by the proposed reduction in cost of street lighting. Yet the majority of Council's members refused even to consider the private lighting reduction and finally rejected the proposed street lighting ordinance.

"It is obvious that rejection of these rate-reducing ordinances has cost and will continue to cost the City of Circleville and the people of Circleville a loss of more than $10,000 a year."

On the other hand there seems to be no reason to doubt the sincerity of members of council, either the majority or the minority, on the now locally-famed 4 to 3 split vote on the utility issues. All councilmen are for lower rates. Some of them believe the reduction offers of the light company are sufficient, others believe that greater reductions can be secured, if not from the power company, then through municipally-owned plants.

Municipal ownership has been a disputed question ever since public utilities sprang into existence. An imposing list of city-owned utilities in Ohio can be printed, but an almost equally impressive list of failures can be shown. This list will be printed later, as well as brief histories of some municipal plants. The advantages and disadvantages of municipal plants will be set forth as well as the advantages and the handicaps, for there are some, of privately owned plants.

These articles will show that of 100 Ohio cities all but 19 own their own water plants but that only 24 own their own light plants, and that while water plants are generally undisputed successes, light plants as a rule produce controversies as to whether they are operating successfully or not. Yet there are a few outstanding municipal light plants that have been unqualified successes. One of these is Bellefontaine, which will be given consideration in this series.

TO DISCUSS TAXES

Meanwhile the next article in this series will discuss phases of the tax question which cannot be ignored in a discussion of privately owned utilities versus municipal plants.

MANY ATTENDING SPECIAL SERVICES

The evangelistic meeting which is in progress at Memorial Hall under direction of the Church of Christ is growing in interest and power each day. Last night the attendance was much larger than at any time before and the interest on the part of those attending is deepening with every service.

There were a number of friends from Chillicothe again last night from the church where Mr. Small held services in May. The evangelists were gratified with the fact so many were present who had not as yet been in attendance.

Rev. Small used as his subject, "What Keeps the Churches Apart in Circleville?" The sermon was a description of the many different doctrines which are promulgated by the various denominations contrary to the simple teachings of the New Testament on Faith and Order. Men's opinions have crept in so much so that the simple facts of the scripture have been lost sight of and as a result a great maze of confusion has arisen to hinder rather than help the true cause of Christ and His Church.

These messages are kindly presented at all times, spoken in the spirit of love, but always true to the scripture and instructive in setting forth the scriptural background for every position advanced. The speaker said in part that Christianity is a teaching religion. It must enlighten the mind, stir the heart and inspire the soul to higher and better living or else it is not of God and cannot expect His approval. "Tonight the sermon topic will be, 'The Old Time Religion.' The singing under direction of Owen M. Walker, singer for the meeting, will consist of old songs one of which will be, 'The Old Time Religion.'" Mr. Walker will use for his special solo, "The Old Fashioned Faith."

Services begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Closing The Gap

THE releasing of $115,513,610 of federal construction funds for national and local projects, with insistence by the president that the latter be got under way as quickly as possible, means an early boost in purchasing power. The effect should be to strengthen the foundations of the national recovery act.

The gap between consumption and production must be narrowed if the government's hope of an early restoration of prosperity is to be realized. Retail sales, according to the latest figures, are not keeping pace with increased production. This condition gives no cause for alarm. It may be due to several factors. Persons long out of employment and who have had to go into debt while waiting for things to "open up," are likely, on regaining work, to use their surplus funds in paying their debts rather than for the purchase of unnecessary articles.

Many persons, too, have been practicing rigid economy so long that it has become a habit with them. Only gradually will they break themselves of it and go into the market for luxuries and other articles not absolutely necessary to their existence. It required time for them to become adjusted to the practice of self-denial and it will require time for them to return to a more normal level of living.

With work plentiful and fair wages prevailing, there will be little need for further incentive to increased buying—provided prices remain within reasonable bounds. The billions the government has authorized to be expended in giving work to the idle constitutes a back log of purchasing power that will be felt when this money begins to get into circulation. It is important, though, that no unnecessary time be lost in doing this.

No Hope

IT was too good to be true. Were our nature more cynical than trusting, we might not have been a party to raising the hopes of the pedestrian only to see them now dashed to the ground and shattered by the very parties we sweetly and innocently believed to be his friends. It is an experience that may warp somewhat our hitherto abounding faith in the essential goodness of man.

That is to say, it is only a matter of weeks since it was reported that the great and good men who are commissioned with the control of traffic hither and yon had heard with tear-dimmed eyes the pleas of pedestrian hordes for a square deal in the division of the right of way. Uplifted and inspired by that seeming demonstration of man's nobler attributes we gushed forth a psalm of praise and thanksgiving. We effervesced in ecstatic contemplation of what seemed to be a victory for that step-child of fortune, the pedestrian.

It was entirely premature. We were victims of our too eager credulity. We were swept away by our uninhabited emotions. Today the harassed pedestrian finds his path made steeper and rougher in some cities by traffic rules placing him in a class with his mortal enemy the motor vehicle, and elsewhere his few remaining rights are being taken from him under the threat of extermination under the wheels of crushing, rushing traffic.

No genius is a hero to the proof reader who must punctuate the stuff he writes.

CHAPTER XXVII

It snowed all day on Tuesday, the last of December. The ground was covered with a blanket several inches thick, and there were powder-puffs of feathery snow on the electric light globes that hung on either side of the entrance to the apartment house.

All day Mary Faith had felt tired and drowsy. All day, in obedience to some blind law of nature, she had aken little naps, sitting in her chair beside the dining-room table, as if she were preparing herself for some great ordeal.

"Well, everything is in order now or the baby," Mrs. Farrell said to her late that afternoon when the street lamps were beginning to flash their light into the pearly winter dusk. "Even the little bed's all made up, isn't it?"

"A year ago today Kim and I were down in Garrettsville," Mary Faith murmured. "I remember we took a walk in the afternoon and there were a lot of little kids coasting down the hill near Aunt Ella's house. I didn't dream then that I'd be having a little baby of my own so soon."

She stopped, and a look of amazement and pain swept across her face. Hanging on to the edge of the table she pulled herself to her feet. She was halfway to the door of the room when another pain ran over her body like a sheet of flame.

She heard Mrs. Farrell's voice behind her. "Where are you going, Mary Faith?"

She tried to answer her but she couldn't make a sound. . . . She knew where she was going. She was going to the telephone to call up Kim and tell him that he must come to her just as soon as he could. . . .

Then she saw the marks on the wall of the hallway where the telephone box had been. The black twisted wires still stuck out from the plaster, like the roots of burnt trees. . . . She had forgotten that the telephone had been taken away.

"You're in pain, Mary Faith, aren't you?" she heard Mrs. Farrell's voice above the sound in her ears that was like a great flood of waters rushing past her. "I'll run in next door and call Dr. Thatcher—Oh, my dear Lord!"

Darkness closed over Mary Faith. She knew vaguely that someone lifted her to a bed presently. And later on she heard a voice, hoarse with agony, shrieking for Kim—and

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

I HEAR there was a difference of opinion in one of the newspaper offices the other night. Since it isn't right to tell tales out of school, I won't mention any names. But this here city editor has been trying to get the news items classified so that it will be easy for folks to find what they're looking for. Every day he has to settle some row about where some items are going to go, because the society editor sometimes wants a good divorce item that the crime reporter thinks ought to go in with his stuff.

Well, the other night the police reporter says, "See here, I got a story about Mister Collins shooting his mother-in-law."

"See that it gets in with the other crime stuff on page four," says the city editor to his assistant. "Not on your life!" says the sporting editor. That's sport, and anybody ought to know it! I want that for my marksmanship corner on the sport page!"

So the sporting editor won, of course.

never knew that it was her own voice. She only knew that the woman who was calling was in terrible agony. Then a sweetish, sickening smell was in her nostrils and she knew nothing more. . . .

A light was shining in her eyes when she opened them. At first she thought she was looking straight into the sun, and then she saw that it was her own little yellow-shaded bed lamp. She was in her own room, in her own bed. She could feel the pillow, soft and cool, against her cheek. She ached all over and she was too tired to move or speak. She closed her eyes again.

Then all at once, someone was bending over her. A man's deep voice was saying, "Are you awake, Mrs. Farrell?"

She looked up. Dr. Thatcher was bending over her and beside him stood Kim's mother. She was holding a small white bundle in her arms, and as Mary Faith tried to lift herself from her pillows, Mrs. Farrell laid it down beside her.

Turning her head, Mary Faith looked at the baby. Here was her love for Kim in the flesh—the little soft body, tender as flower petals and warm as life itself. One hand was curled up tight against the little face, like a tiny pink seashell.

"Well, there's your son, Mrs. Farrell—born just as the bells were ringing in the New Year. What do you think of him?" Dr. Thatcher asked in his brisk hearty way. He backed away from the bed, and beyond him in the shadowy doorway Mary Faith saw Kim.

Kim! . . . He came toward her and there was a white stony look on his face. He stood beside the bed and suddenly she saw tears spring into his eyes.

"Don't, Kim," she held her hand out to him. "Don't, dearest. . . . Everything's all right."

He knelt down beside her, burying his face in the pillows close to hers. So close that she could smell the faint dry scent of his blond hair.

"Your hair—it always smells like birch bark," she murmured weakly and foolishly, and began to cry because she was so happy.

By the middle of February Mary Faith was on her feet again—and not only on her feet but on the very tips of her toes, more eager for life and work and happiness than she had ever been before.

The days were all too short now although she got up at six o'clock every morning when the baby stirred in his little bed and began to shout for his bottle in a voice that to her was the most beautiful sound that was ever heard.

"Listen to our son and his little hunger-song," she would say to Kim as she slipped out of bed and hurried into the kitchen to warm the first little six-ounce bottle of the day. "He's going to be a grand opera singer some day, and don't I know it!"

"Or a radio announcer, at least," Kim would answer drowsily and good-naturedly. He was as proud of the baby as Mary Faith was. Sometimes when she came back from the kitchen she would find him bending over the little bed, touching the baby's cheeks with one of his big fingers and talking to him in a gruff man-to-man way.

"Shut up or I'll bust you one on the beeper—hear me?" he would say. "You make as much noise as a fire whistle. Cut it out."

Every night Kim came home between five and six so that he could see Mary Faith bathe the boy and tuck him into the warm blankets of his bed.

On Easter Saturday he brought home a chocolate rabbit for him, to the enormous amusement of Mary Faith.

Kim! . . . He came toward her and there was a white stony look on his face. He stood beside the bed and suddenly she saw tears spring into his eyes.

"Don't, Kim," she held her hand out to him. "Don't, dearest. . . . Everything's all right."

He knelt down beside her, burying his face in the pillows close to hers. So close that she could smell the faint dry scent of his blond hair.

"Your hair—it always smells like birch bark," she murmured weakly and foolishly, and began to cry because she was so happy.

Faith and the horror of Mrs. Farrell. And he bundled him up and took him for an airing on the seat of his car.

"Our life is just the way I always pictured it," Mary Faith said to him that night as they sat in the living room waiting for the Maldons to come over and play bridge with them. "Long before we were married I used to dream of the time when we'd have a home and a baby and friends to come in to spend the evening with us once in a while—and now it's all come true."

"You'd better rap on wood," Mrs. Farrell spoke up from her chair beside the window. "I always think it's tempting Providence to tell yourself how lucky you are."

Mary Faith laughed. "You're worse than a rainy day, Mother Farrell," she said cheerfully. "Kim and I have had all our bad luck."

She got up and sat on the arm of his chair, rumpling up his hair and twisting it somehow so that he looked utterly unlike himself for a second.

"Haven't we had all our bad luck and all our bad times?" she asked him, her arms around him. "Haven't we come out on the sunny side, and aren't we most—terribly—frightfully happy?" She kissed him between each word and he looked as if he liked it.

They were as much in love with each other these days as they had been during the first year of their engagement, when Kim had wanted no one but her.

He wanted no one but her now. Sometimes the Maldons called up and said that they were coming over to play a few hands of bridge and he would frown and look gloomy when Mary Faith announced the news to him.

"Why don't they stay at home once in a while?" he would ask. "Gosh, I never saw such a pair as those two birds!—In all the time I stayed at their house I never knew them to spend a quiet evening. They were always calling somebody up to come over and make 'hoopla' with them or getting dressed to go to somebody's house for the evening or to go to some place and dance and have dinner."

It was Claire's fault—Jack's pretty quiet and steady. She drags him around after her like a kid with a Teddy bear.

The Maldons never made much "hoopla" when they came to the flat to spend the evening. For one thing the baby was asleep and they had to keep quiet. And for another Mrs. Farrell always sat in the room and looked over the evening paper while the other four played cards, frowning at them every now and then.

"I don't care very much for that Maldon girl," she told Mary Faith the morning after one of the Maldons' visits. "She gives me the jitters, the way she's always wriggling her shoulders and singing under her breath. . . . And I wonder if she thinks her face looks pretty, all painted up like a signboard!—No, I don't like her."

About a week later Claire popped in one afternoon on her way home from downtown. "Popped in" was the only way to describe the way she came rushing into the flat with her bracelets jingling and the white-tipped tails of her silver fox scarf swaying.

"I can't stay two minutes," she said breathlessly. "I just wanted to bring the baby in a little present. It's a cup and I have his name engraved on it. There's been enough argument about naming him so his Aunt Claire just settled it by having 'Kim' put on the cup."

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Any motion picture directed by Clarence Brown, who has filmed such outstanding photoplays as "Flesh and the Devil," "Anna Christie," "A Free Soul" and "Letty Lynton," is invariably anticipated by the knowing flingor as something above the ordinary.

"Looking Forward," Brown's latest effort, which comes Thursday and Friday to the Cliftona Theatre, more than lives up to the exceptional standards set by this brilliant screen director. Depicting an intensely human story of the effects of the depression on rich and poor alike, the picture is stirring enacted by Lionel Barrymore in the starring role, and a distinctive group of supporting players.

TWO FAMILIES INVOLVED

The story of "Looking Forward" probes into the lives of two men and their families under the acid test of current business adversity. One of these men is the head of a great London department store, the other is a plodding, honest, old "worm," who had been employed by the firm for forty years as a bookkeeper.

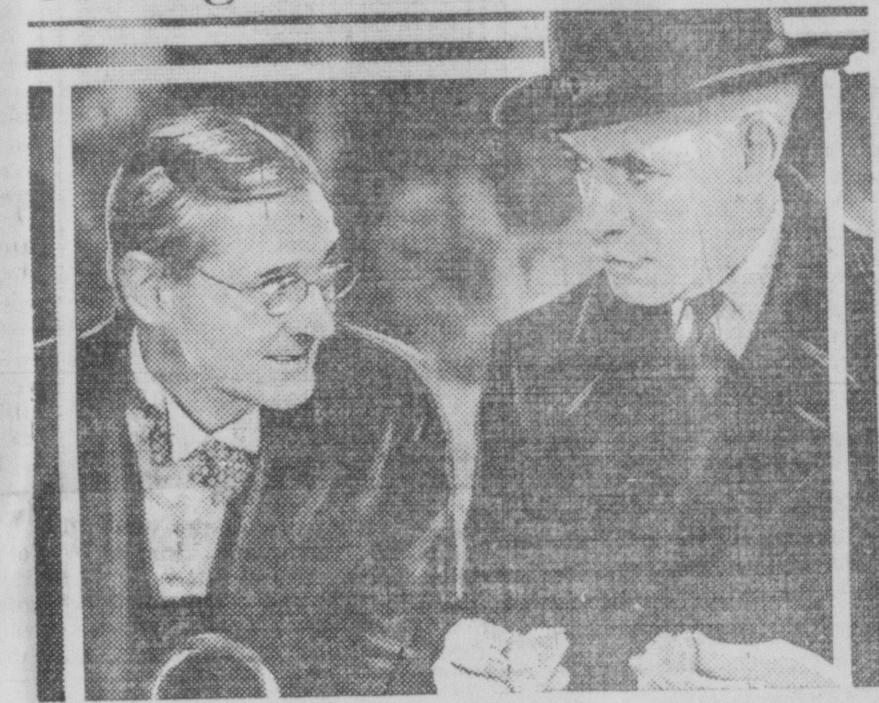

AT THE GRAND

The environment of a department store, even though it was for the time only a movie set, proved too much for Hale Hamilton, Columbia actor, while "Parole Girl" was being filmed. The company used a smart downtown Los Angeles shop for location, and Hamilton purchased $10.00 worth of merchandise from the store manager, despite the fact that the place was closed to customers.

"Parole Girl" due at the Grand Theatre, features Mae Clarke in the title role. Others playing important roles are Ralph Bellamy, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Marie Prevost.

News of Paris says men are the best dressmakers. It does take a man to dress a woman.

Pneumonia a Summer as Well as Winter Disease

Dr. Copeland Warns Against Careless Treatment of Colds During Warm Months

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D., United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

PNEUMONIA is a disease which may occur during the summer, as well as the winter months. This disease is often referred to as "captain of the men of death"; it respects neither age nor sex, nor season of the year.

Pneumonia used to be called "inflammation of the lungs" and usually follows a minor cold or some infection of the nose, throat or ears. It is most common during cold days and in changeable weather. But, as I have said, it often occurs during the summer months when there is apt to be greater carelessness about a cold.

It is a good plan never to allow your body to become chilled. If you are harboring the germs of pneumonia, or are exposed to these germs, you are liable when chilled to contract the disease. This warning should be observed particularly by children and elderly persons, who are extremely susceptible to this dreaded disease.

Avoid Chills and Drafts

Chilling of the body lowers the resistance of the body against disease. It leads to irritation and congestion of the lungs, which is the first stage of pneumonia. Such congestion frequently occurs when bathing on cold days or from lying on the ground or on any cold surface after becoming overheated. It may be traced to carelessness in passing from a warm room to colder air outside without wearing the necessary protective clothing, or it may follow sitting in a draft after exercise.

Of course, one form of pneumonia may be a complication of some infectious disease. This is especially common in children who are underweight and undernourished and are stricken with some childhood infection. For example, it may follow measles, whooping cough or scarlet fever. Acute infectious diseases of children should never be ignored and considered as a "normal event" of childhood.

Pneumonia Is Contagious

Bear in mind that pneumonia is a contagious disease. Persons afflicted with this disease should be isolated and other members of the household kept away from the sick room. It is always a good plan, if possible, to take the afflicted individual to a hospital. Here he will be made comfortable, receive the proper care and attention, and not be a menace to the health of those at home.

Pneumonia is a serious disease. Its oncoming is sudden and often overwhelming. Its prevention is far easier than its cure. Protect against pneumonia at all times of the year. Do not neglect colds and infections. Avoid drafts and, above all, never allow yourself to become chilled. Pain in the chest, irritating cough and fever are signs that must never be overlooked. Immediate medical attention is essential. Neglect may lead to a serious stage of pneumonia, with a stormy and difficult convalescence.

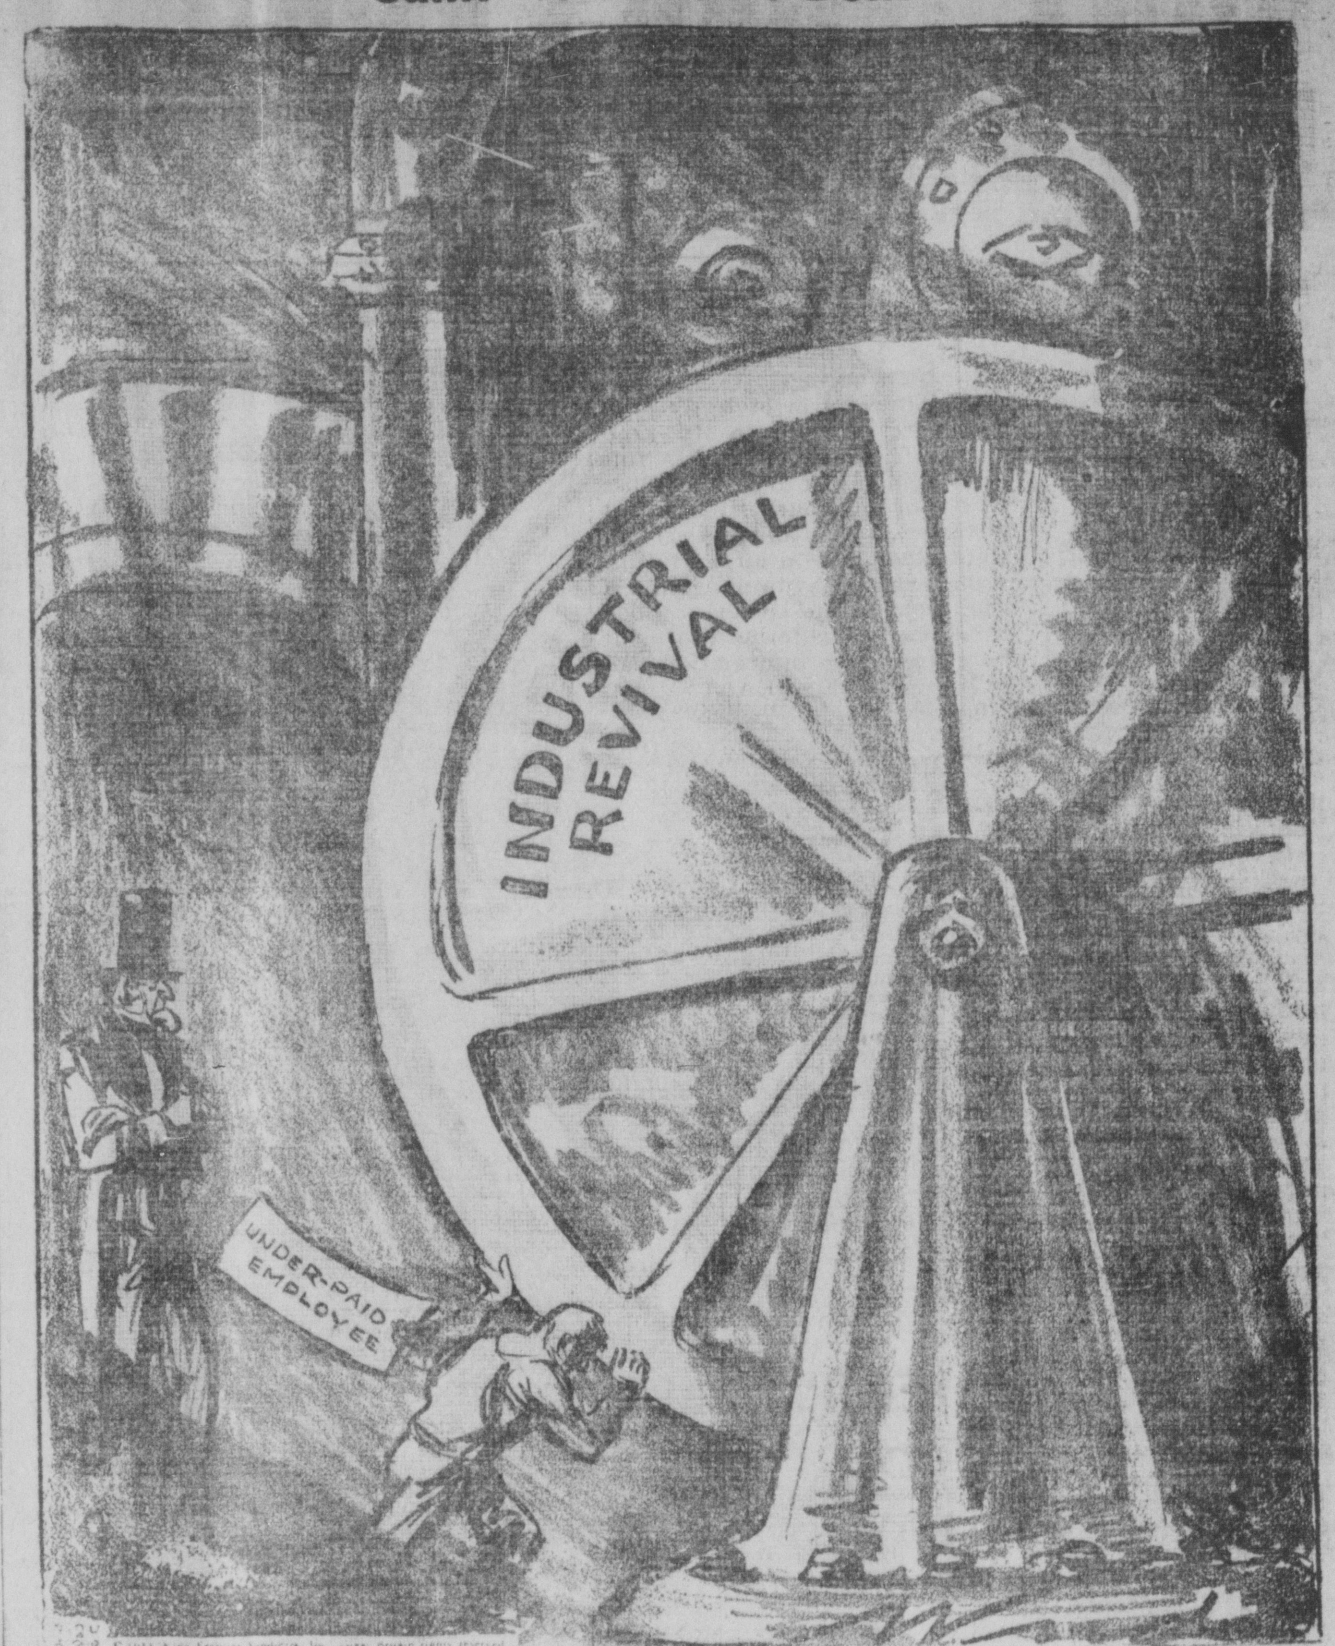

Answers to Health Queries

L. P. Q.—What causes white spots on the hands, and what will make them less noticeable?
A.—This is usually due to loss of pigment or coloring matter. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

R. P. Q.—What should a girl of 19, 5 feet 2 inches tall, weigh? 2: How can I gain weight?
A.—She should weigh about 118 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

2: Eat plenty of good nourishing food, including milk, eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables. Exercise daily in the fresh air. Get plenty of sleep and rest. Take cod liver oil as a general tonic.

GIRL SCOUTS ENJOY COVERED-DISH SUPPER

Deserving of much praise among the local organizations for benefits derived from being a member is the Circleville Girl Scout troop No. 2. The troop comprised of 24 members has progressed rapidly during its two years of existence and the only thing it lacks is the backing of an adult organization.

Members of the troop are enthused about their work and desire to organize as soon as possible more troops throughout the county. The girls think a great deal of their captain, Mrs. P. S. Herberholz, who helped them organize and appreciate highly their assistant captain, Mrs. Ward Robinson, who is doing wonderful work with the troop during these summer months in the absence of Mrs. Herberholz. Mrs. Robinson realizes the splendid training and the great benefits young girls receive through being a Girl Scout and through her the troop is making many plans.

The girls have been canning this summer and planning and cooking meals for their mothers. The delightful party given by the girls Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mary Jane Schiear was a splendid example of the training and results received by being a Scout. The planning and preparing of the delicious supper and decorating and setting the tables were done by the scouts.

An account of Tuesday afternoon's meeting by assistant scribe, Laurence Cook, follows: "On Tuesday afternoon, Girl Scout Troop No. 2, of Circleville, held a very pleasant meeting at the home of Mary Jane Schiear, on N. Scioto-st. The program opened with the flag ceremony and the reading of minutes. Plans were made for a swimming party to take the place of the next regular meeting. Sarah Jane Meisse, who is a guest member of the troop for the summer, gave an interesting report on Girl Scout Camping, as she had experienced it. After singing a group of songs, the girls engaged in an open discussion of Scout Laws.

"Following the meeting, the group repaired to the basement where a covered-dish supper was served at small tables. The decorating committee, consisting of Gail Dauenhauer, Ruth Robinson, Mary Jane Schiear and Jean Theobald, had made the room beautiful with flowers, lamps and candles and each girl present performed a definite part in the serving of the meal which had been prepared entirely by troop members. Ruth Patterson was responsible for the place-cards, while Benadine Yates had made nut-cups. Before leaving the tables, Jean Cryder thanked Mrs. Schiear, in behalf of the group, for the courtesy extended in the use of her home. The radio hand-clasp concluded the meeting. An hour of games, under the supervision of Helen Cellar, rounded out the day.

"Martha Ellen Wright, who is visiting Marjorie Leach, was an out-of-town guest at the meeting."

"A Notice to the Wayfarer" by Miss Mildred Shaner was followed by a series of readings by Mrs. A. 'Achievements of Women' Is Theme Of National Exposition Oct. 11-18

CINCINNATI, July 18.—Woman's achievements in this man's world will be brought into high relief through the medium of the Woman's National Exposition, to be held in Music Hall, Cincinnati, Oct. 11 to 18 inclusive. Plans for the exposition were outlined here today by Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, honorary president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who is general chairman of the event, following approval of a set-up arranged by Mrs. Margaret R. Brooks, exposition director.

Keen interest has developed in the enterprise among women's organizations throughout the middle west. Among the prominent organizations that are already actively co-operating are the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs and the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs. Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio patriotic societies, literary clubs, such as the Ohio Rebekah Assembly, women's political groups—indeed, every phase of organization representing woman's place in the present day scheme of things, have enrolled as sponsors of the project. The Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce and Convention Bureau also have placed their influence back of the undertaking.

Mrs. Hobart explained that the Woman's National Exposition has for its purpose a distinct service to women in every walk of life. It is given by women, for women. It represents not only those activities of peculiar and exclusive interest to women, but also those in which women work hand in hand with men.

A feature will be a "Congress of Famous Women." Women of national reputation as lawyers, teachers, artists, poets and writers, those who have climbed high on the ladder of success in social service, politics, commercial and social life, will be included in this "Congress." They will be invited to participate in the Exposition as leaders, visitors, or exhibitors.

A child health exhibit, an art exhibit by nationally known women artists, directed by the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, a tri-state quilt exhibit, and a cooking school will be among the special features.

Saturday, Oct. 14 has been designated as Tri-State Day, when Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana womanhood will join forces in the friendly spirit of their neighborliness, to present a program of particular interest to the women of the three states.

TO PEOPLE WHO WANT SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

There are some things we refuse to do to sell a car. We like sales, but fair-dealing and the confidence of our customers are desirable, too. For one thing, we refuse to poison anyone's mind against another make of car. We know what our car is and what it will do, and we are ready to tell you about that. But to imply defects in another car is not our business.

We have done our utmost to encourage intelligent buying of motor cars by showing purchasers how to protect their own interests. All that a good producer asks is a customer who knows quality when he sees it. An intelligent purchaser will speedily conclude that only a bad product requires bad sales methods.

We refuse, also, to adopt the role of tricky trader—that is, pretending to offer you a larger trade-in allowance, and taking it away from you in some other way. Ford trade-in values are high, but we do not make fictitious allowances in order to get a sale which may be otherwise disadvantageous to the buyer. Our dealers take used cars upon a system of values, not by haggling or barter.

In this world no one gets something for nothing, although there are many ways of making people think that they do. The sure way to get value for value is, first, by being yourself willing to deal on that basis, and second, by dealing with a concern that has no other policy.

We refuse to keep dinning in your ears that the Ford V-8 is the best, most economical, lowest-priced car. That is claimed for several cars. Obviously it cannot be true of all. There comes a point where claims and adjectives and all advertising hysteria disappears in its own fog. Personally, I prefer facts.

We say the new Ford V-8 is the best car we have made. We say that our 8-cylinder car is as economical to operate as any lower number of cylinders.

We say that we have always been known as the makers of good cars and that the many good, well-balanced qualities of our present car places it at the head of our line to date.

Anyone wishing to do business with us on these principles will find our word and the quality of our product to be A-1. What we say about economy, operation and durability will stand good anywhere.
